Snowmobile Cover

Installation Instructions

Thank you for purchasing a Skinz Protective Gear Snowmobile Cover. We believe this is the highest quality cover available today. This product is innovative due to its waterproof feature and its ability to stretch. Today's snowmobiles differ so much in style, design, and are able to be customized which require a cover that can adapt to the changes in shape. This cover will shape according to your snowmobile and will look great when installed. Please review the following steps that will ensure long life and lasting results.

1. Always install the cover starting with the front skis. First, cover both front skis and arrange cover around snowmobile evenly. Drape down sides which will ready the cover to be stretched towards the rear.

2. Pull the cover over the rear bumper of the snowmobile by pulling on the rear nylon colored section of the cover. While pulling towards the rear, work the cover around windshield, bar ends, handlebars, etc, for fitting around rear bumper. On snowmobiles with riser bars or bar ends you may have to work the stretch portion of the cover towards the rear of the snowmobile. Do not continue to pull if the cover is hung up on handle bars or bar ends. Keep working the cover over obstacles towards the rear. After a couple of installations you will be a pro and will have learned your specific installation procedures.

3. After step 2 is complete, pull all around the cover to "balance out" the stretch all over the cover. Once this is complete, connect the 3 body straps and pull tight so cover pulls around and under snowmobile. You are ready for travel. Be sure to inspect the cover during travel and adjust/tighten if needed. If excessive flapping or cover begins to have trouble, remove and contact Skinz Protective Gear.

4. Cover can be washed on gentle cycle in cold water and hang dry. There is a patch kit included with the cover. If you get a hole in it, follow the instructions to repair or re-enforce an area.

Important Note: The first fitting of the cover will seem very tight. Once the cover has been installed 2-3 times or has been towed behind a vehicle, the cover will stretch slightly to a comfortable fit.
